Northwood's Porter

According to BJCP, an American porter should be substantial. More assertive than an English porter, less assertive than an American Stout.

Northwood's Porter certainly holds its own. A perfect choice for the season. US, German and English malt. German hops. Dark mellow, malty with an assertive roastiness. Great for the cooler weather. Available next Tuesday November 5!
Porter; ABV 6.5%; IBU 39; 27 color

Things just Scotch better!

Mr. Chesterfield!

Each autumn, Mr. C, returns for a visit to the taproom, warming our hearts. Smooth, rich and malty. A brown beer for the winter.

Style: Strong Scotch Ale
ABV: 8%
IBU: 26
Color: Brown

Distance Learning

Peter and Margaret are heading off for adventure education. They'll be traveling to Bamberg, Germany to tour the Weyermann Malt facility where our deliciously roasted grains are processed. This visit, I'm sure, is strictly educational and presents an opportunity for inspecting the quality of ingredients to be used in our upcoming brews! What does the color of malt tell you about the beer? What does the color of the beer tell you about the malt? Which malt color do you prefer?

Perhaps you'll enjoy this little rant from the blog of Iron Horse Brewery titled The Color of Beer, and Why it Confuses People.
